RELEASE INFORMATION

A story based on the survey findings presented in this release and background memo will appear in Sunday's Star-Ledger. We ask users to properly attribute this copyrighted information to "The Star-Ledger/Eagleton Poll."

Most of the questions used in this survey on religion replicate trend items that have been asked in national studies conducted by the Gallup Poll. The Background Memo attached to this release indicates the specific Gallup Poll questions and compares the New Jersey and the national responses.

PROFILE OF RELIGION IN NEW JERSEY

While New Jerseyans are almost unanimous in their belief in God, fewer residents — 2-in-3 — participate in organized religion by belonging to a church or synagogue. Even fewer residents are regularly involved in religious activities with about 4-in-10 reporting they attended a church or synagogue in the week prior to the survey.

Looking at society as a whole, 6-in-10 New Jerseyans think religion is losing its influence on American life. On a personal level, about half of the state's residents say religion is very important in their life.

"This profile of religion in New Jersey shows the gaps between New Jerseyans' religious beliefs and their religious practices," commented Janice Ballou, Poll Director. "Just about everyone recognizes the existence of God, but two-thirds formalize this belief by joining a religious organization and only about 4-in-10 attend religious services."

The Star-Ledger/Eagleton Poll conducted between February 24 and March 1, 1995 with a randomly selected sample of 801 New Jersey adults is the first comprehensive profile of New Jerseyans' religious practices and their attitudes about religion. Many questions included in the poll replicate those asked in the Gallup Polls on religion. The Gallup Poll has been tracking national religious trends since the 1930's. By using these questions, this survey provides an opportunity to compare the religious profile of New Jerseyans with people nationwide.

Overall, New Jerseyans' religious beliefs and behaviors are similar to people nationwide with the following exceptions:

- ▶ Residents of New Jersey are twice as likely to be Catholic compared to people nationwide by a margin of 48 to 24 percent and less likely to be Protestant by a difference of 35 to 58 percent. Also, in New Jersey 5 percent report they are Jewish compared to 1 percent nationwide. One percent of New Jerseyans say they are Greek Orthodox, 1 percent Hindu, and 3 percent identify with some other religion.
- ▶ New Jerseyans are less likely to believe religion can answer all or most of today's problems by a margin of 45 to 59 percent.
- ▶ New Jerseyans are less likely to say religion is very important in their own life by a margin of 49 to 60 percent.
- ▶ New Jerseyans are less likely to describe themselves as a born again or evangelical Christian by a margin of 24 to 39 percent.

ROLE OF RELIGION IN SOCIETY AND FOR THE INDIVIDUAL

Overall about 6-in-10 New Jersey residents say that at the present time religion as a whole is losing its influence on American life. Catholic residents (69%) are more likely than Protestant's (54%) to say religion is losing its influence.

In addition, somewhat less than half of the state's residents — 45 percent — believe that religion can answer all or most of today's problems compared to 30 percent who say religion is largely old-fashioned and out-of-date and 24 percent who did not have an opinion on the role of religion in society. Women (51%) are more likely than men (40%) to say religion can answer all or most of today's problems. Also, non-white residents (59%) are more likely than whites (41%) to feel this way as are Protestants (59%) compared to Catholics (43%).

On a personal level, about half (49%) of the state's residents say that religion is very important in their own life compared to 34 percent who say it is fairly important and 15 percent who say it is not very important.

New Jerseyans 65 years old or older (67%) are more likely than younger residents to say religion is very important in their lives. Also, women (56%) are more likely than men (44%) to feel this way. Protestants (57%) are more likely than Catholics (51%) to say that religion is very important in their lives.

RELIGIOUS BELIEFS

Almost all New Jerseyans believe in God, however fewer residents — about 6-in-10 — believe in life after death.

While 93 percent of New Jerseyans believe in God, 5 percent do not and 2 percent are not sure if they believe in God. Women (96%) are more likely than men (90%) to say they believe in God. New Jerseyans with higher incomes and those who are college graduates are less likely to believe in God.

A similar 91 percent say they pray to God. Again there are gender differences, with women (95%) more likely to say they pray to God than men (88%). And, New Jerseyans with higher incomes and those who are college graduates are less likely to say they pray to God.

Fewer New Jerseyans say that they believe in life after death. While 64 percent do believe in life after death, 27 percent do not hold this belief, and 9 percent do not know. Women (67%) are more likely than men (61%) to believe in life after death. While about 3-in-4 residents with annual family incomes of $30,000 to $70,000 believe in life after death, about half of those with annual family incomes under $30,000 or those with annual family incomes over $70,000 have this belief.

RELIGIOUS PREFERENCES AND CLASSIFICATIONS

About half (48%) of the state's residents report Roman Catholic as their religious preference compared to 35 percent who are Protestant, 5 percent Jewish, 1 percent Greek Orthodox, and 1 percent Hindu.

One-in-four (24%) New Jerseyans describe themselves as a born again or evangelical Christian. Protestant (43%) residents are more likely than Catholics (16%) to describe themselves as born again. Also, non-white residents (43%) are more likely than white residents (19%) to say they are a born again or evangelical Christian.

The religious right is a classification that is frequently used to describe people active in political and social issues. In New Jersey, 12 percent think of themselves as a member of the religious right movement compared to 82 percent who do not. Protestants (19%) are more likely than Catholics (9%) to say this classification describes them. Equal percentages of New Jerseyans who say they are liberal (15%) and those who say they are conservative (15%) report they think of themselves as members of the religious right movement compared to 9 percent of moderates.

RELIGIOUS PRACTICES

The most typical religious practice is belonging to a church or synagogue and attending religious services. While 2-in-3 New Jerseyans say they are members of a church or synagogue, fewer residents attend services. New Jerseyans who are members of a church or synagogue tend to be Catholic, 50 years old or older, residents who have annual household incomes that are $50,000 or larger, and those with more than a high school education.

In the week prior to the survey, 37 percent of New Jerseyans report that they had attended a church or synagogue compared to 62 percent who did not attend. Women (45%) are more likely than men (31%) to have attended religious services in the past week. Also, New Jerseyans who are Catholic, those 65 years or older, and those who have more than a high school education are more likely to have attended a church or synagogue in the past week.

Overall, 46 percent of New Jerseyans report they seldom (32%) or never (14%) attend church or synagogue. In comparison, 29 percent attend at least once a week, 8 percent attend almost every week, and 17 percent attend about once a month. Catholic residents, women, residents 65 years or older, and those who have more than a high school education are most likely to attend services at least once a week.

About 1-in-3 New Jerseyans read the Jewish or Christian bible at least once a month with 8 percent reading it daily, 14 percent weekly, 3 percent almost weekly, and 12 percent monthly. Overall, 62 percent read the bible seldom (36%) or never (26%).

Protestants (47%) are more likely than Catholics (34%) to read the bible at least monthly. Also, women and non-white residents are more likely than their counterparts to read the bible at least once a month.

BACKGROUND MEMO — RELEASE SL/EP52-4 (EP102-4), SUNDAY, APRIL 16, 1995

The latest Star-Ledger/Eagleton Poll was conducted between February 24 and March 1, 1995, when a random sample of 801 New Jerseyans, 18 years and older, was interviewed by telephone. Figures based on this sample size are subject to a sampling error of about ± 3.5 percent at a 95 percent confidence interval. Sampling error is the probable difference in results between interviewing everyone in the population versus a scientific sample taken from that population. Sampling error does not take into account other possible sources of error inherent in any study of public opinion. The questions and figures referred to in this release are presented below. The location of each question on the actual questionnaire is in brackets.

Most of the questions used in this survey on religion replicate trend items that have been asked in national studies conducted by the Gallup Poll. This Background Memo indicates the specific Gallup Poll questions and compares the New Jersey and the national responses.
